Guided Walk from Peter's Hill, Queen Victoria Street to the Middle Temple Paul Taylor and John Barrett: Thursday 7 July 2011 from 10.30 am followed by Lunch in the Middle Temple Great Hall

Following successful walks in previous years we have again asked our two City of London Guides, Paul Taylor and John Barrett, to take us on a guided walk through the City pointing out both the familiar and unfamiliar landmarks. The walk this year will be different again from previous years and will take advantage of the views from the roof of One New Change, the recently opened shopping Mall. One of the popular features of these walks is that they end with lunch in the Great Hall of Middle Temple.

The walk will start from the International HQ of the Salvation Army at the north end of the Millennium Bridge on Peter's Hill which has a coffee shop and public toilet facilities. The restoration of the St. Lawrence Jewry Fountain, which now stands at the east end of Carter Lane near St Paul's Cathedral, was completed in August 2010. One New Change is London's newest shopping attraction, a modernist building that has a panoramic lift in the middle that gives direct access to a public terrace at roof level with new and exciting views over St. Paul's Cathedral dome. The route will then pass through Paternoster Square, adjacent to St Paul's, and on through Warwick Square at the back of the Old Bailey to reach the Ludgate development.

After crossing Farringdon Street the walk will reach Gunpowder Square and Gough Square which contains Dr Johnson's house surviving from the early 18th century. Then into New Street Square to look at the new office buildings clustered around this tranquil square lined with cafés and restaurants before crossing Fleet Street and on to Middle Temple Hall for lunch. The Hall was completed in 1573 and has a splendid double hammer beam roof and fabulous craftsmanship in its wooden screen.

Meet in Café 101 on the lower ground floor of the International Headquarters of the Salvation Army at Peter's Hill, leading to the Millennium Bridge, from 10.30 am. Groups will set off at 10.50 and 11.00 am. Each guided group will be limited to 15 persons so there is an overall limit of 30. These places will be allocated in order of receipt of applications. The cost (without wine which may be bought separately) will be £22 a person.
